Israel-Jordan: [Israel is continuing to send occasional military patrols into the sensitive "area between the lines" in Jerusalem. Although the Jordanian Government is anxious to avoid incidents with Israel, Jordanian troops find it difficult to ignore seemingly provocative actions of this kind. The Jordanian battalion previously stationed along the wall had to be replaced after it fired on Israeli patrols on 14 June and 4 July without authorization from higher headquarters. New exchanges of fire thus may occur, and one or the other side might call for UN Security Council action.]

Morocco-USSR: [The Moroccan Government may soon accept a Soviet proposal to construct a shipyard at Tangier. Last February Soviet technicians completed a preliminary survey of the project, which will cost about $30,000,000. Foreign Minister Balafrej on 3 August implied to the British ambassador that negotiations with the USSR were advanced, if not actually concluded. Balafrej gave no indication as to when work might commence; he affirmed that the government intended to engage a Western resident engineer as supervisor.]

[The King and his government want a shipyard at Tangier in order to expand the area's limited industrial facilities and reduce the chronic unemployment there.]

Bolivia: Armed violence between civilian militia units threatens to spread in the Cochabamba valley southeast of La Paz, according to the US military attachés in Bolivia. Dissatisfied with the governing Nationalist Revolutionary Movement's conduct of recent congressional elections, one militia unit invaded a neighboring town on 1 August and killed a leader of a rival unit who apparently was a supporter of the central government. Troops stationed in Cochabamba have been recalled from maneuvers, and additional troops were sent to the area on 4 August. The government may be hesitant, however, to use the army against the traditionally more popular civilian militia.
